Anna Silivonchik

widely recognized and prized for her stark individual style, is a leading force among the young generation of Eastern European painters.

Those who have been lucky enough to experience her works in person often draw aesthetic parallels with Chagall's oeuvre. No wonder, as Mark Chagall's whimsical realism, along with the naïve art of the 20th c. primitivists as well as national folklore and decorative art, are the main sources of Anna's aesthetic inspiration.

In her works, however, Anna has created her own distinct world of fairy tales, the coming-to-life of childhood fantasies and dreams that appeal to children and adults alike. This world, inhabited by mythical beings and contemporary humans alike, is a world we unconsciously long for – world of simple unadulterated, eternal human feelings such as love, happiness, and joy.

At the same time, this world is a reflection of the eternal laws of nature (transition of the day into night, change of seasons, life and death) as well as difficulties of human relationships, home, the family, the search for the meaning of life, and a conceptualization of the principles of the world's creation.

The unique and multi-faceted combination of images and thoughts Anna offers to her viewer -almost always with a slight dash of humor- generates a strong emotional charge and through surprising metaphors produces unexpected associations.

Whether searching for subjects and solutions to artistic problems or exploring depths of human psychology in her creative process Anna taps into the archetypes found fairy tales, myths and her native culture while maintaining purposeful ties to the 20th century art. As a result, her art is imbued with positive energy - it exudes joy, love and harmony.
